

Cutlery with thin handles

This lightweight cutlery requires a minimum of effort to use. It has long thin handles to allow a comfortable grip in the hollow between the thumb and index finger. The long handles reduce the need to lift the arm as high as with normal length cutlery. The underside is gently rounded to prevent point pressure.

Combination cutlery

This lightweight cutlery consists of a knife/fork and knife/spoon and is designed for use with one hand only. The handle permits a secure grip, with its rounded underside and flat upper side. The cutting edge is on the underside of the blade to prevent injury to the corners of the mouth. The knife/fork is available in either right-handed and left-handed versions, while the knife/spoon is suitable for both right-handed and left-handed use.
